

Village Pines School: An Attainable Private Education in Palmetto Bay

ABOUT ONE MILE SOUTH OF THE FALLS Shopping Center, sits a small private school nestled behind Rockdale Pineland Preserve. Village Pines School opened its doors in 1960 as a preschool, meeting the needs of the youngest learners in Miami.

Lucille Frazier started Village Pines School in the early 1960's after moving to Miami with her family. A University of Miami alum, Frazier dedicated her life to educating young minds. Village Pines has been a glowing example of this dedication as a thriving "pillar of the community."

Over the years, Village Pines School has grown and prospered in the same location. With classes beginning at Level 3 (3 years old) through the 5th grade, Village Pines provides an exciting, complete, challenging and creative curriculum that prepares the students to be 21st Century thinkers. All curriculums are based on the current Common Core expectations and standards so that students are traveling the road to college and career readiness.

Village Pines prepares children for the future with "hands on" enrichment, as well as fulfilling all state requirements, including SAT testing. Taking into consideration that all children learn in different ways and rates, the highly certified and seasoned staff help them achieve success in an atmosphere of affection, praise, and encouragement. The small class size ratio, combined with dedicated and nurturing teachers, allow each child to learn and to develop to his/her capacity.

Village Pines School recognizes that academics are only one phase of a child's development. In order to function successfully in the "real world," social and emotional development are of extreme importance. Village Pines strives to meet the social, academic, and emotional needs of each child, encouraging each to develop into a well-rounded, respectful member of society.

Their mission is to develop responsible citizens who are lifelong learners and who will contribute positively to their communities and society. When students leave, they are well prepared both academically and emotionally for the next phase of their educational experience.

Frazier, now nearing 95 years old, has now passed the torch on to her daughter, Margery Amerling. A life long educator, Amerling has dedicated her career to the many phases of educating children, from teaching in the classroom to consulting with a national publishing company. As the administrator of Village Pines School, Amerling's goal is to carry on her mother's legacy to educate the children of south Miami-Dade.

Village Pines School believes all children are capable of learning and growing to reach their potential. With a diverse population where tolerance and respect for others is fostered, Village Pines is proud to be able to provide a private school education at an attainable level.

Village Pines School is located at 15000 SW 92nd Ave. For more information about the school, please visit www.VillagePinesSchool.org or call 305-235-6621.
